and student delegations from the universities have been closeted with Henry Kissinger, Patrick Moynihan and other members of the White House staff, and also with members of the cabinet. These discussions have led to some brutally frank exchanges in which administration officials, while continuing to support the President, have conceded the need for change in the relations between the administration and the anti-war end to be far more important than all the public tumult.

Two incidents here in the last few days indicate the rising opposition within the government itself to the President's foreign and defense policies.

Last Priday, The New York Times received in a plain envelope through the mail a copy of a top-secret memorandum from Secretary of Defense

Mr. Laird's views of the U.S. negotiating position in the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union in Vienna. Actually, the memorandum contained nothing particularly new or startling and The Times did not publish it, but the incident suggests that the opposition within the Pentagon has now reached the point where even highly classified documents are being purloined and distributed to the press.

The other incident was a letter to Secretary of State William P. Rogers from more than 200 officers and employees of the Department of State, protesting the invasion of Cambodia and the renewal of the U.S. bombing (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Reuther and Labor

The tragedy that sent Walter Reuther down in flames did more than put a flaming period to a colorful career. In a sense, and to some degree, it was a funeral pyre for labor in politics. Not altogether, of course; organized labor will continue to help its political friends and fight its enemies. But Walter Reuther came closer to shaping unions into something resembling the Labor parties, and Social Democratic parties, of Europe than any of his contemporaries. And if there is to be a successor, he has not yet emerged above the horizon of contract fights and strikes. Reuther was a product of the great battles to organize American labor during the Depression. He was, perhaps, second only to John L. Lewis in that struggle-and he cast a longer shadow. He had a questing mind, as well as great personal courage, and he saw in labor a mighty social force. His nemesis. curiously enough, was his own success in organizing labor, and in winning for it legislative and general public sanction. For like the French peasantry, after it had won a stake in the land through the Revolution. the American worker—the organized worker -has become a conservative force in the land. He is ready to strike for more pay and perquisites, he is ready to fight and vote for the right to strike—but always within the system. He will reject efforts to bring new groups within the rights he enjoys, he scorns student rebels, and grumbles over taxes. And Walter Reuther, in his later years, was more preoccupied—at least on the surface—with power than with his long-held goals of power.

Reuther fought against the entrenched leadership of the AFL-CIO and broke with the organization he had done so much to create, to ally with the more rebellious Teamsters. Perhaps this alliance might have been a catalyst for some new labor influence in government at large. The omens, however, are against such a development in the area controlled by the auto workers and the Teamsters. It may yet emerge from the newer, more intellectualized groups, such as the teachers or government employees generally

But the prevailing mood of the American worker, white collar and blue, is group gain rather than community action. There are few Repthers on the scene to command wide. deep allegiance; more rank-and-file rebels can summon up support against any leadership. The unity won with so much difficulty during the New Deal, and so strongly represented in Frankin D. Roosevelt's coalition, has fragmented, and only puts in an appearance when there seems to be some common threat.

Walter Reuther was viewed, in his heyday, as a threat to the American system-a reversal of the trend which Samuel Gomners had established in which the unions were just bargaining agents for their members, and which was signalized symbolically by the American choice of Labor Day over May Day as the workers' holiday. Reuther did accomplish much in broadening the scope of labor negotiation, and labor interest, beyond wages. But he also saw the great mass of American labor enter the middle class, with all its aspirations and

Jump in Unemployment

Last month the unemployment rate climbed to 4.8 percent—up from 4.4 percent in March and 3.5 percent at the start of the year. There is cause for serious concern both over the speed of the rise in unemployment and over its composition.

Until the April figures were released, administration spokesmen had been expressing their satisfaction that the rate of unemployment among Negroes and other nonwhites had been rising less than among whites. But last month the unemployment rate for whites rose from 4.1 percent to only 4.3 percent, while the rate for blacks jumped from 7.1 percent to 8.7 percent. Unemployment among youths under 20 has reached almost 16 percent, with a heavy concentration among blacks. Thus, racial disadvantage -and racial discrimination-are again bearing their bitter fruit. If these trends continue, they tensions.

It is true that President Nixon warned months ago that there would be "slowing pains" as a result of his policies to cool off the economy and stop inflation. But the rise in unemployment is coming faster and steeper than his economists predicted: the annual report of the Council of Economic Advisers in January forecast an average rate of anemployment of only 4.3 percent for 1970 as a whole. This will almost certainly be one more example of the administration's misplaced optimism.

At the same time, inflationary pressures remain strong. While the economic slowdown may have begun to reduce the rate of rise in wholesale prices, the resumption of quite sharp growth in the money supply, the slippage of the budget into deficit, and the escalation of wage demands by labor unions make it far from certain that the inflationary trend will not be intensified rather than moderated in the months ahead. Inflation is bad news both for employers and for workers; by squeezing profits, cost-push inflation forces layoffs of workers. In his press conference last week, the President sought to reduce worry over unemployment by forecasting that the gross national product will pass the trillion-dollar mark by the end of this year. He did not say how much of this would result from inflation. The President and his advisers cling to a hope that the lagged effect of the past slowdown will check future inflation, while the coming rise of GNP will simultaneously check rising unemployment.

Thus the administration continues to hope to find just the right middle path between too much stimulation and too much restraint and thus simultaneously stop both inflation and unemployment. But the time is rapidly approaching when the administration must face up to the failure of its forecasts and to the necessity of building a broader program to achieve these conflicting objectives. Besides general control of total demand, the administration needs two other basic weapons: an income policy to curb inflationary price and wage behavior, has begun a period of irreversible and a stronger federal program to prepare decline. It is "about to join other nations which were once preposthe low-skilled for employment, to break job discrimination, and to find or create jobs for those who are the victims of what Mr. Nixon calls "our fight against inflation."

International Opinion

Verdict of the People

The United States is capable of both producing a witch-hunting McCarthy or of electing liberal John Kennedy. A proponent of the war, elected to make the peace, President Nixon believed that he could take again his real face when the "silent majority" answered his appeal. The opposition actually appeared to be crumbling. Considering that all obstacles were removed, Mr. Nixon decided to spread the war to the whole of Indochina. The opposition in the universities and the Congress immediately regained its full strength. The American people hesitate. Their verdict is still uncertain. Yet it is they who will eventually dictate their policy to Mr. Nixon. -From France-Soir (Paris).

Ireland's Future

It is to be feared that in the face of the "menace" from the south, the Northern Irish Protestant leaders will harden their position and halt the reform movement aimed at least partially at satisfying the Catholic minority. It would then be difficult for London to keep supporting Belfast, and the future of Ulster would again be uncertain. Would London go so far as to administer Ulster directly, as demanded by some circles, without recognition of the Belfast ruling team, and leaving Ulster local autonomy such as that given to other regions of the United Kingdom?

Some people suggest the dissolution of the Ulster Parliament, followed by a constitutional conference where the Catholics and Protestants would join hands in drafting a new constitution protecting minority rights. Whatever will be the situation and whatever decision it will take, the London government will find it difficult not to be drawn into the Irish horner's nest.

-From Le Monde (Paris). * * *

For the time being the forces of moderation remain in command in the Republic of Ireland. Mr. Lynch has acted with a political courage in Dublin that Maj. Chichester-Clark must match in Bolfast. This means and materials to compensate for not only pressing ahead with civil rights reforms but also taking whatever preventive action is necessary to limit the risk of civil disturbance. It was a pity that the Republican parades at Easter were permitted because this has made it all the more difficult to ban the marches of the Orangemen in July and August. But the latest disorders in Belfast have confirmed how inflammable the situation is.

L ONDON.—Judging by the reacthe United States faces a crisis confidence among its friends in Europe. The Cambodian invasion and its consequences have aggravated the longstanding worry that America, in its obsession with Southeast Asia, will forget Europe. To that has been added a new uneasiness about the predictability and the judgment of the most powerful man in the world, the

But the deepest concern, among the many who love the United States, is with the state of the American people. Again and again the British-in government and men and women-mention to our society. Is the turmoil within the United States a result of passing trauma, or does it reflect some long-term historical phenomenon? The latter view is taken in a book to be published shortly in New York: "The End of the American Era." by Prof. Andrew Hacker of Cornell. It is an apocalyptic work.

Period of Decline According to Hacker, America

sessing and are now little more than plots of bounded terrain." Americans still believe in their country's world ascendancy, but that is finished.

The reason is a historical process by which a people grows pow-erful, then rich, then so selfish that individuals will no longer sacrifice for common concerns. They cease to share ideals and so will not undertake public obliga-

"The American temperament," Hacker says, "has passed the point where self-interest can subordinate itself to citizenship . . . Contemporary Americans simply do not want—and will not accept—political leadership that makes more than marginal demands on their emotions or energies. A society so inordinately attached to personal pursuits cannot be expected to renounce them just because social survival demands . . ." In foreign policy, Hacker sees two choices for the United States in future.

One is to go on trying to "impose order in far-flung places of our choosing," using "men and money our declining moral conviction." But failure may frustrate us so much that we hit out wildly, abandoning diplomacy and risking unlimited war.

Moral Enervation

"The other option," Hacker says, is for a majority of Americans "to admit that our nation is in a state of moral enervation; that we have no more lessons to impart to others; that the way of life we have created has ceased to be a model for people beyond our borders; that we lack the will to carry out a worldwide mission of redemption and reform."

It is an arresting book, full of sharp insights and right in its basic judgment that unwillingness to spend for public needs is a main cause of our social decay. But are American idealism and generosity and public-spiritedness really forever finished? Hacker would doubtless put this down to American optimism, but I think they need not be.

The history of nations does not and then falling. Other countries process is too complex, the thought have had terrible periods and then recovered. England, for example, bled itself white in the Hundred Years' War in a futile attempt to keep French territory under the Crown. And there was the American Revolution. Correlli Barnett, an English military analyst, drew a parallel in a recent issue of Rorizon between English feelings over the revolt of the American Colonies and ours over Vietnam. George III and Lord North, he wrote, were "no less ironbound in their sense of righteousness about the supremacy of Crown and Parliament" than American presidents in their com-

The British hawks of the day, sounding like a Pentagon briefing, dismissed the American rebels as "contemptible." But gradually British forces got bogged down on an alien continent, and discontent even riots—flared at home. Anti-war politicians flourished.

At length the British gave up. Their sense of failure was acute. But what happened? Barnett

"Once the American war was liquidated, Britain's mood chang-ed with astonishing speed. National hope and self-confidence were reborn. Instead of the decay and disintegration to which men had looked forward, Britain's greatest wealth, greatest power and greatest influence in the world were yet to come." The parallel is far from exact.

dinary Americans are plainly in disturbed by what has been allowed to happen in Cambodia. So those of us who oppose the war have that rare thing in life-a second chance with public opinion. But campus protest and congressional maneuver can easily blow the chance again. More than ever, the requirement is to engage in majority politics—not minority militancy. Good evidence of the state of opinion comes from the Gallup Poll taken immediately after the President's Cambodian speech. The poll showed that only 51 percent of the country approved Mr. Nixon's handling of the Cambodian problem. That is a pathetically narrow margin on the morrow of an impassioned presidential plea for support on a major national

The fact is that the disposition to give the President the benefit of the doubt-the political equivaient of the willing suspension of disbelief-is on the wane. Thus, though Mr. Nixon claimed that the American engagement was limited, 55 percent of those polled thought there would be "major involvement" of American troops and 58 percent were fiatly opposed to sending Americans to Cambodia.

Much Resentment

against the war is not going to be rallied by student protest and campus strikes. Rightly or wrongly, most Americans resent the whole cultural revolution associated with modern young peopletheir clothes, hair styles, films, music, and political opinions. Even the polynant episode at Kent State strikes many Americans as a case of what happens to people who throw stones.

As Gov. Ronald Reagan has shown, nothing is easier than to build a majority by running against the kids. Student protest is the meat on which mini-Caesars feed. The mounting of congressional pressure on the war is equally tricky. Assertions of constitutional precedent may sound fine on Capitol Hill. But for most of us, constitutional argument is a blind alley-a bourne from which no debater ever returns. Similarly with cutting funds. The always show a curve steadily rising authorization and appropriations

What It Takes

Students, in particular, are almost ideally suited for political action. They have money and brains. They can make the time -and here the Princeton decision to allow students off for campalgring next fall is particularly sensible. For given the weak-nesses of the party organizations, students can play a truly influential role.

Two years ago they helped to retire Lyndon Johnson. They could easily have pulled out enough black Yarborough in the Democratic primary in Texas a week ago. And they can convert the primaries and congressional election this fall into a Vietnam referendum—the kind of election that will mean trouble for all those who have backed the war.

As for the congressional leaders, they too need to be directing their But this potential majority efforts to public opinion. They too need to be going out into the country, buttonholing the citizenry, speaking in the towns and neighborhoods.

For they have an overwhelming message to deliver. It is the message that the Nixon administration has been dragged by the Saigon regime and its self-interested American patrons into a policy of

Think how costly a hospital confinement will be. Imagine paying for those indispensable doctor, surgical and nursing services that are not covered by your present insurance.

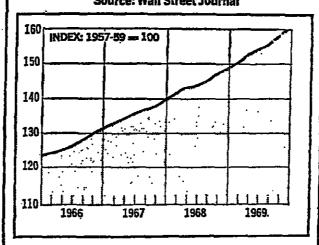

Would you be able to afford the quiet and privacy of a private room and a private nurse, should you so desire? Or a telephone to keep in touch with loved ones? Or the rental of a TV set to help pass the lonely hours? Who would pay your bills that keep on coming in at home? Many folks have lost their life savings, their cars, even their homes trying to meet runaway hospital and medical costs. And no one knows whose turn it will be next.

Why you must act before the date shown on your Enrollment Form—just a few days from today.

Why do we give you so little time to enroll in this Plan-only a few days? Because this is a limited Enrollment Period—and we must receive your Enrollment Form at the same time as all the others in order to pass on to you the savings that come from processing many policies at one time. This highly efficient mass enrollment method enables us to give you the broadest

HERE ARE YOUR LOW RATES.

The following rate chart shows how little it costs after the first month to protect yourself, your spouse and any adult depend-ents. Naturally, at these low rates, we can issue you only one policy of this type. Each adult, 16 or over, pays the rate shown for his or her age.

Alan Davie's Symbols From a Dark Kingdom

By Max Wykes-Joyce

T ONDON, May 11.-Magic and color are the keynotes of this week's most exciting exhibitions in London, that of works by Alan Davie, a Scot who is concerned with symbols and totems, emblems and the dark kingdoms of the primitive soul. He scatters his symbols—the trefoll and the magician's staff of office, the trefoil and the crescent moon, the diamond and the sun, the target, the heart and the eye-over vast fiercely colored canvases. A se-lection of his recent oils, with titles such as "Moon Maiden's Garden" or "Sorcerer's Wall." are now to be seen at the Gimpel Fils Gallery, 50 South Molton Street.

Davie is a Celt, the son of a painter, at various times in his career a jazz musician and a jeweler by profession and broadcaster, lecturer, and teacher of art to children. All these activities have much influenced his ways of seeing, of thinking and of expressing himself. At first, one sees only the childlikeness of his work, which has the marvelous directness inherent in children's art, and which he has succeeded in preserving despite magnificent technical competence. The exhibition is entitled "Alan Davie and His Music": It does all the things that great art should-excites and delights and moves us. And is for me, through May 30, a place of dally pilgrimage.

Another Scottish colorist of great ability was John Duncan Fergusson (1874-1961) who, with a group of his compatriots, settled in France in 1905, where he both painted and taught, and where he was in the forefront of the Fauve movement. There is a splendid nude, entitled "La Force dating from his Paris/ Fauve period, which is one of the highlights of the current exhibition of his oils and watercolors entitled "Nudes and Bathers," to be seen at the Leicester Galleries, 22A Cork Street

There is a group of a dozen oils, painted between 1928 and 1932, all using the same model, who was, I believe, the artist's wife. These are rich, fine variations on a theme, by no means representational, much influenced by Cézanne and the Cubists, full of spiendor and the joys of living.

The magic component in Muriel's work was noted by the celebrated French critic Henri Heraut in the words: "It is no accident that Muriel rhymes with Ariel"—and indeed there is something fey in the colors with which she portrays birds flying against the stars, moths of glant proportions, bareback riders and vast popples, young matadors and dancers in splendid suits of lights, crewless sailing boats beating across a moonlit lake.

These recent oils and gouaches of hers, now showing at the Archer Gallery, 23 Grafton Street, have immense poetry about them, backed, especially in the gouaches, by a superto sense of color, and enjoyment of life and of living things.

One of the most intellectual of contemporary artists is R. B. Kitaj, now living and working in London. There was recently a large exhibition of his work the Kestner-Gesellschaft, Hannover, and at the Boymans Museum. Rotterdam, from which many of the best works have been brought to the Marl-borough New London Gallery, 17/18 Old Bond Street.

These include the two large nils of 1966-"Walter Lippmann," now in the Albright-Gallery, Buffalo, and "Erie Shore" from the Nationalgalerie, Berlin and works borfrom Patimore. Angeles, Cincinnati, and the Museum of Modern Art, New York, as well as a variety of new portraits and graphics.

Art in Rome_ U.S. Art Week Shrouded In Protest by the Exhibitors

By Edith Schloss

ROME, May 11.—A week of American art exhibitions, five in all, under the auspices of the U.S. Information Service, and celebrating the 100th anniversary of Italy's annexation of Rome, started on a serious note. All but one of the exhibitors at the American Academy covered their work with black. The exhibiting fellows explained their protest of the invasion of Cambodia by saying "indi-viduals have decided not to be associated with an official activity of the U.S. government at a time when its President has embarked on a course which poses a monstrous threat to world peace."

Compared to this exhibition, Ad Reinhardt's mystic blacks and Christo's packages remain sophisticated jokes. At the American Academy a point had to be made and a sober environment of pictures and sculptures mourning under black was just, begutiful and somber. Rhode Island School

Among the other American institutions (which did not protest) participating in American week, the most compact and clearest show was the one at the Rhode Island School of Design. The work of its stu-dents reflects, as it usually does, the recent trends at home: There are hardly any abstractions any more, but still quite a few examples of pop art. tive: ordinary or extraordinary people in everyday situations. With the exception of Cy Twombly: He, with his own special sensibility, has given impetus to a whole generation of young Italian artists—a style so new, it is nameless. It is amazing what a world can be thrown open by a few marks, scratches and blobs. Sentiments and passions are reduced to their simplest, roughest and most direct meaning—pure as poetry. Pepper, with a large, pleated throw of heavy dark fron, is very timely and close to the finish of the Italian Lo Savio. Social Messages From Hollywood

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss CANNES, May IL There is an amusing paradox to be found at this year's Cannes fes-tival From Hungary (IRT, May 7) and Czechoslovakia (IHT. May 9-10), countries usually giving political lectures on the building of socialism, have come a film on falconry and a Freudian fantasy, while MGM and Warner Brothers have taken up the preaching of social change.

MGM unveiled a flashy, zooming-camera epic about the American college revolts, "The Strawberry Statement, which, though often recalling Busby Berkeley rather than problems on the Berkeley campus, prophetically includes the murder of a student by the police during a riot. Warners is represented by "Woodstock," a three-hour cel-luloid record of the pop music festival in the cow pastures on the outskirts of that town last summer. This fete was attended by 500,000 youngsters, all apparently anxious to rock the establishment boat. The release of the film veralon by Warners, however, is on a strictly capitalistic basis. In New York, it is being shown at an advanced entrance fee.

Shot and edited by Michael Wadleigh, "Woodstock" is an impressive documentary. Technically, it is a notable feat, employing the split screen and the triple-screen with imposing panoramic results. But it contains more than surface brilliance. Wadleigh has captured, too, the spirit of the affair and captured it so sympathetically and persuasively that the film has with its vast view of hope-ful youth—a moving Whit-manesque quality. Defiant in its dissent from weary old ways, Woodstock" voices the democratic ideal and the joy of peaceful comradeship.

Several performers - Joan Baez, Country Joe, Jimi Hendrix and The Who among them-are seen in action and there are interesting interviews in which young people express their opin-ions—for once coherently.

Ettore Scola's "The Drama of Jealousy" was presented this evening to augment the gaiety of the festival.

A comedy-melodrama in the style of "Divorce—Italian Style," it is an irresistible piece of earthy cinematic fooling about the havoc the green-eyed monster visits upon a middleaged Roman bricklayer when bored by his elderly wife, ce falls under the spell of a co-quettish flower girl Marcello Mastrolanni as the malcontent meson and Monica Vitti as nis feather-brained inamorata play exhibitantingly and to the hilt, while Scola's entertaining treatment provides the film with a

The Art of Making French Bread

By Jon Winroth

is much good figurative work.

DARIS, May 11.—French bread is something of a wonder to Americans, whose own standardized, industrialized, vitamin-enriched white foam has been described by James Baldwin as blasphemy." French bread is made by hard-working artisans who sell it hot out of the oven, its crunchy crust undefiled by cellophane or plastic. Only human hands touch it—the baker's and the buyer's.

But the French are not easily satisfied. They grumble incessantly about their bread, mostly to the effect of how good it was before the war. This may seem like quibbling to Americans but the French are right. Science and industry have also taken over bread in France and only a few bakers put up any serious resistance.

The foremost is without a doubt Pierre Poilane. His 4pound loaves have made the celebrity rounds from the cinema studios of Boulogne to the Elysée Palace. Stone-ground flour. sour-dough leavening. wood-fire baking and Mr. Poilane's own shrewd genius have made his bread a status symbol.

While other bakers suffer from a diminishing French appetite for bread stoday, Frenchmen eat less than a quarter as much bread as they did at the turn of the century), he is baking over 15 tons a week.

The Others

Still, there are a few bakers who use today's ultra-white and ultra-tasteless flour and still manage to put out something that reminds Frenchmen of the bread they used to eat before science achieved ubiquity. One of the best of these is Jean

__Music in Italy_____ 'The Crocodile': A Controlled Happening

By William Weaver FLORENCE, May 11.—Traditionally, the Maggio

Musicale-Florence's long-established spring festival—is interested in new works; and it has sponsored a number of world premieres and Italian premieres, including the first performance of Dallapiccola's "The Prisoner," now internationally known. Saturday, in keeping with this tradition, the Maggio presented for the first time a new work by Valentino Bucchi entitled "Il Coccodrillo" ("The Crocodile.") inspired by a Dostoevski storv.

The grotesque libretto is the work of the composer himself in collaboration with Mauro Pezzati: but it is not a conventional libretto, nor is "Il Coccodrido" a conventional opera. Bucchi's intent was to create a kind of theatrical event. a controlled happening, with the use of film mime, dance, acting, electronic music, along with the expectable singers, orchestra, and chorns Dostoevski's clerk is made a symbol, man in the age of alienation and the affluent society.

In the past, Bucchi has written effective music and there are some skilled pages in this new opera respecially in the writing for chorus or for orchestra alone), but his reach has exceeded his grasp, and much of the time "Il Coccodrillo" ems both obvious and pointless. The symbolism is laid on with a trowel-we even see the inevitable mushroom cloud-and the humor is elementary. At one point there is a parody of a popular song, called "The Song of Coexistence," with unfortunate Brechtian echoes.

Mounted by the Testro Communale of Bologna (where it will presumably be seen next season), the new work was given an elaborate production designed and staged by Virginio Puechs kept things moving—including the scenery—but he still couldn't breathe life into an approximation of the still couldn't breather the into an approximation of the still couldn't breather the into an approximation of the still couldn't breather the into an approximation of the still couldn't breather the into an approximation of the still couldn't breather the sti tially stillborn work. Le Giara, too, with garish sets by Renato Guttuso, was not successful in Milings tired choreography. But "Apolio Musagates" will fine. "In the old days they had better flour. They had better wheat to begin with. It's the same with wine. If you produce too many grapes per vineyard. you get a lot of wine but it has taste. Modern agriculture produces too much wheat per acre for it to have any taste. Modern milling procedures also make flour so pure there's nothing left to it but starch and gluten," Mr. Chanrion said.

"It used to take five hours to get dough ready for baking. First the flour, water, salt and yeast were kneaded in a mechanical kneader for 15 minutes. Then it was allowed to ferment for three to four hours. When it was ready the baker formed the loaves and allowed them to rise for another hour before baking them.

"About ten years ago highspeed kneaders appeared and changed everything." Mr. Chanrion explained. "The dough was kneaded for up to 25 minutes at high speed but only allowed to rise for a quarter of an hour or so before being formed into loaves. These continued to rise for another couple of hours before baking.

"You can see why this system is popular. It takes only about half as long as the old one. But the rising is so forced that you have to add a pill of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) to keen the dough from collapsing. Originally, kneading was done to make dough smooth, not to make it rise," he noted. Fast kneeding heats the dough and not only provokes rising but oxydizes and blanches the dough. This goes along with the mania for snow-white bread, but it also takes the taste out of it and 20 percent more salt has to be added to give it any taste at all. It also produces a bread that dries out very fast." Mr. Chanrion's way of making bread is something of a return to ancient methods adapted to modern materials. It takes six hours but it produces a naturally tasty bread that does not dry out in half a day. His

King Controls Real Effect of IOS Shift Uncertain

By Jim Flanigan

NEW YORK, May 11.-The apparent downfall of Bernard Cornfeld is being recorded in Geneva in tones reserved for the passing of pid, flamboyant orders and the ascendancy of more decorous men of finance.

But questions arise as to how much the internal shuffling at Investors Overseas Services really means change.

John McCandish King has built an empire of his own using techniques similar to Mr. Corn-feld's and, in fact, with the help of IOS, which is one of the principal customers of King Resources Co.

Mr. Cornfeld is well known for introducing the small investor in Europe to the concept of mutual funds. But his organization dealt also with large investors. For them, it developed property on the coast of Spain and ran Swiss banking

The investment vehicles, sold with the messe that inflation was rumous to savings and that many currencies were unstable, was attractive to residents in many countries. Where it could, IOS eventually set up mutual funds within a country, as it did in Italy.

But elsewhere, particularly in underdeveloped nations where no domestic stock markets exist, the demands of governments that IOS reinvest some of the money it was attracting back into the countries of origin brought Mr. Cornteld in contact with John King.

Mr. King is a hearty man of 42 who has a group of companies, chief of which is the pub-licly-held King Resources. This company buys drilling and exploration rights on packages of oil and gas or other mineral leases. It then sells participations in these lease packages to investors at a good profit and for a smaller profit, performs the actual drilling or exploration

Participations in oil and gas exploration typically used to be a rich man's game, practiced for the tax benefits on oil exploration. But Mr. King, through another of his companies, sells oil and gas drilling funds to small investors. The message is similar to Mr. Cornfeld's: In an inflationary world, investment in natural resources preserves capital.

108 Was Big Investor From 1968 to 1968, King Resources depended heavily on sales of leases and services on King oil and gas drilling funds. But King Resources gained in these years a bigger investor who in some operations became a virtual partner of King Resources. That investor was IOS.

"International money wants to get out of currencies and into something that is a good hedge against recession or inflation," Mr. King explained to this reporter. "They picked natural resources."

How much money IOS pours into projects of King Resources is not known. King Resources reports that last year IOS's Fund of Funds invested $60 million in participations in King projects. But Mr. King's operation is also adviser to IO6's Natural Resources Fund and a King Resources subsidiary as late as last fall had plans for developing a partnership with IOS. Those plans: "Wealth development for any country in the world." Mr. King said.

As a King official explained: "IOS is raising money all around the world. The money has been raised for investment in the U.S. stock market. But IOS has gotten so big that they create a balance-of-payments problem for these countries. So the country says reinvest. So what do they reinvest in? There's no stock exchange locally. These countries want money in their natural resources. IOS doesn't have that capability. We do, so there is a natural

Mr. King saw his company developing the resources of underdeveloped countries for a fee, leaving the ownership in the bands of the countries themselves. IOS money was to fuel the

Then IOS began to go sour with the decline in the U.S. and other stock markets Helps Its Ally

In December, 1969, King Resources helped its ally by acting as agent in the sale of Canadian Arctic leases which allowed IOS to boost the assets of its flagship Fund of Funds by $70.8 million. The curious, end-of-the-year boost this gave to IOS is being questioned in financial circles. Such questioning is part of the crisis of con-fidence that today hobbles the Cornfeld empire. With IOS in trouble, plans for "wealth development for any country in the world" could become only a dream for John King. So he is on the scene in Europe, raising money to gain control and keep IOS going.

But Bernard Cornfeld helped John King's empire to grow. John King is now trying to help Bernard Cornfeld's empire stay alive. It's the least a virtual partner can do.

And in the end, nothing much may be changed at all despite all the talk out of Geneva. C Los Angeles Times

At Gramco liquidity means $45,000,000.

Before Gramco's* pioneering concept was introduced, an investment in U.S. real estate was open only to the select few. The international investor, if he wanted to share in the rewards of this type of investment, had to be rich enough—and patient enough—not to worry about the time it would take to turn his investment back into money.

Gramco has changed all that. Our concept is that an investment in United States real estate should not only be profitable—but also liquid.

We keep 45 million dollars ready throughout

We keep 45 million dollars ready throughout the world, so that an investor in our Fund, USIF, Real Estate, can get his money back whenever he wants.

But very few of them want to. Because investors in USIF, Real Estate, the world's largest mutual fund investing exclusively in prime, income-producing properties in the U.S.A., have seen a steady, uninterrupted appreciation of their investments. In the 39 months since the Fund's inception on January 6, 1967, the shares of USIF, Real Estate have appreciated 44.4% (as of March 31, 1970), or better than 1% a month.

So our investors are sharing in the rewards of a successful real estate investment—and knowing they can put their hands on their money at any time. That's what we mean by liquid real estate.

Our real estate portfolio contains more than 200 carefully selected—and professionally managed—properties, located in the major growth areas of the "Gramen to the exclusive distributor of USIF, Real Estate.

United States. Office skyscrapers, luxury highrise apartment houses, residential complexes, prestige shopping centers, modern multi-storey parking facilities, business and vacation motels, industrial parks and science centers.

These properties are worth over 725 million dollars, and we are acquiring additional properties at an ever-increasing rate.

So when we talk about investing in real estate, we're speaking from experience. And when we talk about liquidity, we have the money to back up our words.

No wonder then that thousands of people in sixty countries around the world have chosen to place their trust in USIF, Real Estate as the best means of achieving their financial goals.

If you would like to become one of them, mail the coupon below or contact your nearest Gramco financial counselor. He will show you how a liquid real estate investment can benefit you.

Gramco—the pioneers of liquid real estate investment works so well one wonders why nobody else can ever bring it off. He selects a situation, clamps it like a hunk of pure carbon in a vise notches and grooves it with details, applies the sharp edge of a steel plate to it, and with the single blow of a mallet. cleaves it. Behold: a diamond each facet refracting the light in a different way. All too often, his imitators botch the opera tion by failing to use that steel plate (intelligence? frony? instinct?); they come down like sledge hammers on the gen and smash it, leaving what looks like a mess of broken glass all over the table.

In "Maigret Hesitates," the situation is a tense household on Avenue Marigny, where a wealthy maritime lawyer, his wife, their children, servants and clerks and an attractive secretary circle around one another waiting for a psychological time bomb to explode. As usual in the later Malgret novels, the mystery resides not so much in events as in character. Armchair detectives will identify the villain halfway through the book. Simenon seems more interested in an aspect of insanity, convincingly embodied in one member of the household, and how Article 64 of the Penal Code will cope with that insanity. The result, of course, is another dis-

"Jigsaw" is Ed McBain's 23d novel about the 87th Precinct, and one almost wishes Evan Hunter would abandon his "serious" fiction and stick to these pseudonymous police procedur-als. They are tough, withy, carefully plotted and invariably informative. I can't think why McBain insists on calling Man-hattan "Isola," and so on, but he writes of the city I must wake up in, and there is blood all over his typewriter keys.

Detectives Brown and Carella are trying to put together a photograph, pieces at which have been bequested to a motley crew of high ters and low-lifes, that reveals the whereabouts of $750,000 m an old bank robbers. Acquiring the pieces of the puzzle and fitting them in take the detectives into art galleries, gay bars, shum housing, suburban patios and the past. If McBain telegraphs his punches somewhat, he makes up for it by deft han potentially dangerous foray into racial humor.

Like McBain, Victor Cenning gives us an enormous amount of information—on high finance, real-estate fraud, nerve gas, gold smuggling. He's something of windbag, but the plot of "Queen's Pawn" is superb, begin-ning with a retired crook blackmailed into a comeback and ending, a dozen betrayals and almost as many corpses later, with an attempt to pirate a ton of gold bullion from the Queen Elizabeth-2 by helicopter. BLONDIE IT'S TAKING HIM DEAR, WILLYOU GET AN AWFULLY MEAGLASSOFMILK, LONG TIME PLEASE? WHILE I WAS DOWN THERE ABOUT I HADA SARDINE SANDWICH

By Alan Truscott

North opened one no-trump as shown in the diagram. East had a normal two-spade overcall, but rejected this in favor of an artificial bid of two diamonds. This was the "Astro" convention, and the bid promised a two-suiter, with spades as one of the suits.

South promptly made a cuebid of three diamondspromptly, because he had failed to ascertain that two diamonds was an artificial bid. Three diamonds sounded like a natural hid to North, who passed under the impression that his partner held a long diamond suit.

West was looking forward to defending a contract of three diamonds when East came to South's rescue. For reasons known only to himself he bid three no-trump, perhaps with the idea of inducing West to bid some suit other than diamonds. West was resigned to having to play in four diamonds doubldown a few tricks, instead of defending three diamonds, but it was now South's turn to rescue the opposition. Instead of doubling three no-trump, which would have led to a substantial profit for his side, he ventured four hearts.

West did not feel any better It seemed to him that North-South were going to make a vulnerable game instead of fail-ing ignominiously in three diamonds. But the bidding was not over: East contributed a double, no doubt with the idea of suggesting a diamond lead. On the face of it four hearts seems a sensible contract for North-South, but South was not happy with the result. West led his singleton club as the best contribution he could make to

Japanese Skies Nearly 2 Miles Down Everest from 24,418 Feet

KATMANDU, Nepal. May 11 (AP).-A 37-year-old Japanese skied three kilometers (1.6 miles) down Mount Everest last Wednesday from an altitude of 24,418 feet, despite losing a ski and injuring his hip when he was knocked down by cyclonic winds, it was learned here today.

Yichiro Miura, Japan's most famous skier, reached speeds of up to 150 kilometers (93.6 miles, an hour, covering the distance in 2 minutes and 30 seconds, according to an official of the Japanese expedition, who flew into Katmandu today with news of the successful adventure.

The most perilous part of the run, the official said, came as Miura was dodging four rocks in his path. Before approaching these rocks, high winds blowing from every

On the morning of May 6, Miura climbed about 200 yards down from the South Col. using a rope, and then began his run. Within five seconds he had reached a speed of 93.6 miles an hour.

IOC Meets Today to Pick '76 Games' Sites

Its members come from 60 na-

Some, particularly those from the Communist bloc—are well organized. Others are hardly with it, like the gentleman who, four years ago, voted for Lahti in Finland for the Summer Games although Lahti had put in for the Winter Olympics. That the committee will come to a decision is unquestioned. How it will get there and what the decision will be are questions lost in the obscurantist clouds that pass for decision-making here.

Nothing can be ruled out as influencing this. 4 Dimensions of Avery Brundage

By Shirley Povich

WASHINGTON, May 11 (WP). — The 1972 Olympic Games at Munich may come up a bit scanty. Also, the Winter Olympics to be held in Japan are similarly threatened with the loss of two categories. Avery Brundage has strongly suggested that the spirit of the Olympics will be better served if basketball and soccer are eliminated from the summer games and if Alpine skiing and ice hockey are booted off the Winter Games' program.

There is entirely too much commercialism in those four sports, according to Brundage. and the Olympics are doomed if the trend continues. He said this "in a blunt 5,000-word speech" to the officers of the International Sports Pederations the weekend in Amster-

It is significant that only Avery Brundage could be blunt in a speech 5,000 words in Bluntness and 5,000 words ordinarily would seem to be counter-productive or mutually exclusive or at least unlikely teammates. But the rules of rhetoric do not always apply to Avery Brundage, who has been unique almost all of his 81 years.

Brundage has been tilting with creeping commercialism for most of his years as president of the International Olympic Committee. He brought the skiing people halfway to their knees in the last Winter Games by demanding they keep the brand names of their equipment out of view at the picture-taking. They did, and Brundage permitted Olympic skiing to continue.

Last week, Brundage cited the case of World Cup holder Karl Schranz of Austria as a "living advertisement" for ski managers who have managed to get his picture with all of the advertising decals onto the official Austrian information bulletin. Brundage said that skiing, along with basketball, soccer and ice hockey, must go, as "they are victims of the materialistic times in which we live." As an example, Brundage declared that in the current state of affairs bemoaned by him. top men can earn $50,000 annually from skiing. However, on this point the accused are probably asking. Where have rou been, Avery Brundage?" Jean-Claude Killy, big winner at the 1968 Olympic Games at Grenoble, wouldn't agree to en-dorse a shoelace for such mis-

The soccer and basketball players use their Olympic fame merely as a jumping-off place for turning pro, according to Brundage, and in the main that is a valid complaint. Jerry West and Jerry Lucas and Oscar Robertson and Walt Bellamy went into the pros following those 1960 basketball Olympics in Rome and the pros were waiting for Spencer Haywood at the final whistle in Mexico

City in 1968. There are no ready figures on how many Olympic soccer players graduate directly into the pros. but many do. And Brundage's gripe with ice hockey is that its ranks are already infested with pros in many countries. Brundage's deep-seated abhorrence of professionalism has been his mark since he became an Olympic officer 50 years ago. He points out that of the 115 skiing medals awarded in the last 10 Olympic Games, 101 went to competitors from only 5 of the 126 Olympic countries. "There is no place in the Olympic program for a sport of such limited appeal." said Brundage, with perhaps pinpoint accuracy.

Wee to Them

Woe to the ski manufacturers and the supporters of barketball, soccer and hockey if they attempt to brush off Brundage lightly.

Brundage is a man who made Eleanor Holm non grata on the U.S. Olympic team some four decades ago for sipping champagne on shipboard en route to the games. Threw her off the team. And the U.S. State Department also knows about Avery Brundage, When he was rebuffed several years ago m his request for a visa to Cacchoslovakia, then off-limits to U.S. citizens, he stormed directly into the office of Secretary John Poster Dulles, emphasized who he was, and not his passport.

As president of the International Olympic Committee, Brundage directs foreign policy as he pleases. No Berlin Wall is recognized by him. He directed East and West Germany to march under one flag in the Olympic parade or get out of the games. They submitted, and he unified the two Germanys.

The latest assessment of the importance of Avery Brundage is offered by the newest Olympic Review, just of the press, which advertises publications of the In-ternational Olympic Committee. The official Olympic Hymn is available for 25 cents. A bibliog-raphy of the works of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympics in 1896, may also be bought for 25 cents. But "The Speeches of President Avery Brundage" is a $2 item. And available for $12, a bargain. is a tome simply entitled. "The other hand, the majority of Americans still support the President's hardline strategy, particularly since they don't have to go. Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, of the Institute of Retribution &

Conciliation, has formulated a plan that may satisfy both groups in this country. The professor told me. "My studies show that there are far more people in this country are for what Nixon is doing in Vietnam than are opposed. "The only trouble is that the people who are the President's strongest supporters are too old to be drafted into the Army." "It figures," I said. "What is Jour plan?'

"My studies," the professor said, "have indicated that there are hundreds of thousands of people who have said to our young citizens, I only wish I were your age so I could fight. The Applebaum Plan makes it possible for these people to get their wish."

But maybe they didn't mean it." I protested. "Maybe they just said it to make the kids feel better."

"Of course they meant it. Do you know of one person who wouldn't give up his soft job if he could slog through the rice naddies of the Mekong delta?" "It's hard to think of one," I admitted. "The beauty of my plan is that you would have a tough, determined type of soldier who would go right into the breech without question."

"Just as in the charge of the Light Brigade," I said excitedly. Eventually, the U.S. Army would only be composed of people who sincerely believed that what we were doing in Indochina was correct."

"It's foolproof, if I must say so myself." said Prof. Apple-baum. "With the men who support Nixon manning the front lines and the men who oppose him back here in the States, we could stay in Vietnam for 20 years, and no one would give a damn."

A Sensation of Freedom, An Icarious Thrill

Louis Allione

By Dick Roraback

FONTENAY-TRESIGNY, France.—They rolled the Pegar out of the hangar on a flat wagon: a pregnant duffel bag, a 6-by-6-foot wicker basket and an outsized Bunsen burner with curls.
"Grab a corner," barked Louis Allione, a Gallic Yogi

Berra distinguishable from the duffel bag by virtue of a blue windbreaker, three pounds of moustache and a jaunty red tam.

"Two thousand one hundred and eighty cubic meters of space in one little bag," said Allione, dumping the load off the wagon, spilling the nylon cloth to the ground and kicking the bulky pack out onto the fairway like a great roll of red and yellow toilet paper. Lend a hand there!"

Half a dozen kids, eager to be of help, tugged and pulled spreading the psychedelic sheet over a quarter-acre of grass and mud. A large German shepherd wandered across the middle of the flimsy carpet, sniffing and scratching. Bored at last with the pedestrian scent of nylon, he raised a hind leg in disdain over the only hot-air balloon in France, then cantered off to bark at an incoming Piper Cub.

The first practical balloon was invented by Joseph Michel Montgolfier and Jacques Etienne Montgolfier. of Annonay." reads the Encyclopaedia Britannica. On June 5, 1783, a linen globe of 105 feet in circumference was inflated over a straw fire, "rose to a great height" and landed after ten minutes a mile and a half away. The experiment was repeated by J.A.C. Charles at the Champ-de-Mars in Paris on Aug. 23. The balloon landed 15 miles away in a field near Gonesse "and terrified the peasantry so much that it was torn into shreds by them."

The flaps of the larger holes in Louis Allione's balloon, near the base of the bag, fluttered like lazy butterflies in a light breeze from the northeast. The smaller holes were neatly patched with adhesive tape. "Nothing to worry about," said Allione to a prospective passenger. "The holes at the bottom are only an esthetic nuisance. You got holes at the top, that's not so good." Allione, surrounded by kids, strode across the redand-yellow field, hunkered down over a tangled cord and reached in his pocket for needle and thread. " said the prospective passenger, covering his mouth. "Nothing to worry about," said Allione, one of his favorite phrases. "You see, I'm sewing this thing— it's called a bullet in English and something a bit more graphic in French—to the rip cord. When we come down, I'll pull on it and a big flap of balloon will peel off, releasing the hot air inside

"What happens if it comes loose while you're up in the air?" asked the prospective passenger. "Zzzp!" said Allione.

"On Scpt. 19, 1783. Joseph Montgolfier repeated the Annonay experiment at Versailles, in the presence of the king, the queen, the court and an immense number of speciators... Suspended below the balloon. in a cage, had been placed a sheep, a cock and a duck, which were thus the first aerial travelers. They were quite uninjured, except the cock, which had its right wing hurt in consequence of a kick it had received from the sheep."

"I set a world record three weeks ago," said Allione. strapping four propane tanks into the corners of the wicker basket "Two hours and 15 minutes aloft, longest ever for the AX-7 class of balloon. Actually, I was going for the distance record but there was no wind, so we just sat up there until we ran out of propane. It snowed.

"I hold a number of national records, too, but then again, I'm the only balloonist in France." A friend taxied a light plane across the field and turned its tail to the balloon, blowing life into the great sack as Allione lifted the flaming Bunsen burner to heat up the prop wash. A number of bystanders were commandeered to scurry about inside the balloon to open up air pockets.

"Pretty good," shouted Allione over the roar of the burner. "She's heating up in there." "Marie-France!" shouted Hubert Le Campion, a photographer from Life magazine. "Hey, Marie-France!" "My wife's still in the balloon," he told Allione apologetically. "Would you mind shutting that thing off for a minute?" "Hurry it up," said Allione. "There's a bit of a

"On June 29, 1850, J.A. Bixto and J.A. Barral ascended from the Paris observatory, the balloon being inflated with hydrogen gas. The day was a rough one. . . When liberated, the balloon rose with great rapidity, and becoming fully inflated. it pressed upon the network, bulging out at top and bottom. The ropes by which the car was suspended being too short, the balloon soon covered the travellers like an immense hood. In endeavoring to secure the valve rope they made a rent in the balloon, and the gas escaped so close to their faces as almost to suffocate

"Climb in," said the skipper between singeing blasts of the burner. "It's a sturdy little basket, don't you think? It's made by the blind people in Birmingham,

"Never had an accident yet, unless you want to count the cameraman who went up with me on the record flight. Left a little souvenir, that one—right over there." Allione pointed to a couple of large and unmistable blood stains on the side of the basket, then let loose another blast of butane. "Hold on, now," he said. "We're going up."

The balloon tugged at its restraining rope, thumped couple of times on the ground, then lifted off, silently, majestically. The German shepherd barked. "I've been flying for 20 years, ever since I was 25," said Allione, his voice suddenly intimate in the intoxicating stillness. "Weekends, vacations. A great release from a sedentary insurance job. "I took up ballooning only last year. Bought this one from an Englishman. I'm perfecting a flexible-wing flying machine, too. When I get the backing, I'm going to retrace the path of Icarus and Daedalus, out of the Labyrinth, from Crete to Delos." The basket swayed hypnotically under the great balloon as the passenger contemplated the ultimate destination of Icarus. "You get the sensation of total freedom up here," said Allione. "The sensation of pure joy, of liberation. It's not like being in an airplane. You're unconfined.

You're not strapped in."
"I noticed that," said the passenger. "The silence, the tranquility," said Allione. "The novelty. Isn't it marvelous? You don't know where you're going. "Wild," said the passenger, who couldn't hear the dog barking any more.

PEOPLE: Of Barks and Bites The dispatches were unrelated thrown together by chance on our desk yesterday, but the jux. taposition of the gut issues of two of the world's major opposing political systems had the impact of a sharp attack of heartburn

From London, UPI reported on The Reality of Monarchy, a book by Andrew Duncan published yesterday in which the feeding of the royal corgi dogs is described by the author: "Rach evening, at about 5 o'clock, a footman brings to [Queen Elizabeth's] sitting room a tray of three dishes and several bowls. The dishes contain, separately, cooked meat, dog biscuit and gravy. A white plastic sheet is placed on the carpet. With a sliver fork and spoon, the queen dishes out portions of the food and gives it to the dogs." The second item an AP dispatch out of Hong Kong, quotes recent arrivals from the mainland as saying that the tra-ditional Chinese wedding, a marvelously uninhibited and belly-stretching affair, has been replaced in Communist China by an austere compulsory ceremony in which wedding guests are required to sing Maoist songs and bow to portraits of the chairman, while the newly weds announce that "only the boundless grace of Map has made our marriage possible." The entire party then adjourns: for a wedding breakfast of grass, bark and soup made from the roots of trees, called a meal of suffering," to remind the happy couple of their obligation to live a life of sacrifice for China.
